MODERN TOKIO

ON QUAKE RUINS*Will Be Patterned After Washington, Capital of United States.*ORDERS BEING PLACED*Machinery and Building Materials for Industry Will Come Largely
From United States; Fear of War
Forever Removed, Japanese Assert.

By United Press.

TOKIO, Sept. 11.—An entirely modern Tokio is to rise from the ashes of disaster. A plan similar to that used in building Washington, D. C., has been tentatively adopted. Electrical, manufacturing and other industries already are placing orders for machinery, equipment and food with United States firms, even before the last of Tokio's carcasses have been cleared from the ruins caused by the quake of September 1 and the resultant fires.

Reports from various devastated districts indicate that the damage to property has been even greater than first reported.

A feeling has grown up that Japan-American friendship has been damaged by the disaster and the immediate aid given by the United States. The possibility of war has been removed forever, they are saying now.

$6,500 REPORTED

JAPANESE RELIEF

Fayette County's contributions to the Japanese relief fund as reported to Red Cross headquarters in Uniontown, passed the $6,500 mark at noon today, while it was said about $1,500 was believed to have been collected but not yet reported.

Chairman G. S. Harrah issued the following appeal:

"The National Red Cross has spent $1,000,000 in anticipation that the people of the United States will raise the minimum amount of $5,000,000, and Fayette county must not fall down in its obligation."

Giant Dirigible Pays New York an Unheralded Visit

By United Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—High above Broadway the ZR-1, the Navy's greatest dirigible, paid a call on New York City shortly before noon today, gliding up town at about 40 miles an hour, its slender silver envelope flushed in the sunlight, the dirigible was a sight that turned all crowds of Manhattan into rubberneck squads.

Over and about the ZR-1 as it hovered over the heart of the city, about 1,300 feet up, little airplanes looking like gnats at play, buzzed and maneuvered.

The giant dirigible was sighted from Staten Island at 11:30 at a height of approximately 1,500 feet. It passed over the east shore of Staten Island from Fort Wadsworth. It passed the Woolworth Building and headed north at 11:40.

Voters Not Being Fooled By Propaganda of Democrats To Create Republican Dissension

Striving to divert attention of the rank and file of their party from the fact that only hand-picked candidates for Democratic nominations for the several county and local offices would be permitted to enter the race, the discredited bosses of that party are making efforts to start propaganda with a view to creating dissensions in the ranks of the Republicans.

To this end all kinds of rumors, near-rumors, fabrications and plain untruths are being circulated with respect to factional divisions among Republicans, reputed "states," "line-ups" of forces and what not. The purpose being so plain no Republicans are being fooled by the usual Democratic tactics. Republicans having, as always, the utmost freedom of choice in the matter of selecting nominees are paying no attention to the more or less frantic efforts of the opposition to make trouble where no cause for it exists.

Republicans will, therefore, not be turned aside from their purpose of going to the primary next Tuesday and selecting a ticket that will comprise candidates chosen for their worth and capabilities, as contrasted with previously selected by the party leaders.

Swing Did Not Slip, Foreman of Painters Declares

Albert Premus, Baltimore & Ohio painter who was seriously burned by coming in contact with a live wire at Leisenring No. 1 last Friday, is said to be making satisfactory progress. It is believed his face will not be marred. A foot is severely burned.

M. R. Watson, assistant foreman of the crew of painters and in charge at the time, said today there was not truth in the report that the swing slipped or that a ladder against the swing slipped. There was no ladder near, he said. He added that Mr. Premus had apparently stepped onto an open wire in the act of taking a seat on the swing. The highly charged wire was burned off and he was precipitated to the West Penn track 20 feet below.

OBSERVATION OF ECLIPSE MAY REVEAL
NEW KIND OF GAS

By United Press.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 11.—The vast solar laboratory into which Southern California had been converted for the purpose of viewing the eclipse broke up today.

While admitting that the fog-bound eclipse prevented them from obtaining any worthwhile photographic results with the possible exception of pictures aviators flying four miles high may have obtained the following important observations were made:

A display of rosy-colored hydrogen gas was recorded by Prof. Mitchell of the University of Virginia, student at Lakewood. Scientists take great interest in the discovery of new gas formations, as helium was first observed on the sun during an eclipse and later observed in smaller quantities on earth.

An interesting demonstration of the sun as to the earth's magnetic condition which may have an important bearing on future chart and compass work was made by Captain Aut of the Carnegie Institute of Washington. During totality he noticed a distinct dip in the magnetic needle and found that the electrical conductivity of the air decreased 10 per cent.

Scientific calculations of the time of the eclipse made years ago were one second off, the moon obscuring the sun one second before the appointed time.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 11.—Successful observation and photographs of yesterday's eclipse of the sun, which was visible here for more than an hour, was reported from various observatories in Mexico to which hundreds of scientific men had come from all parts of the world.

R. K. Smith Hopes
Soon to Be Up

Three weeks to the day after he was seriously injured in an automobile accident at Hickory Bottom, R. K. Smith, superintendent of the schools of Dunbar township had no assurance from physicians when he would be permitted to leave his bed or even sit up.

Mr. Smith suffered a fracture of the pelvis and has since the accident been lying on his back. He has a telephone beside his bed and is close a window from which he watches travel. He hopes to hear the word in a week or two that he will be permitted to sit up in bed.

So many complaints have been received of Pennsylvania Railroad tracks blocking city crossings for long periods that drastic action is proposed by Mayor Mitchell and Council unless the practice is stopped. Two instances recently were reported to Council Monday night. One, which came under the eye of Councilman Louis A. Cypher, was of 21 minutes duration, during which time 70 automobiles were counted as being held up. Another case was of a crew blocking a West Side crossing for 20 minutes. The legal limit was said to be five.

That the company does not countenance such conduct on the part of crews was made evident in a request coming from the trainmaster at Youngwood that cases be reported immediately to the office here, with the understanding that he will be notified at once.

He has promised to see that the annoyance is not repeatedly imposed on the traveling public.

Certain individuals, it is said, are given to the practice of apparently wantonly blocking crossings.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 11.—The board of finance, with sweeping fiscal powers under the administrative code, is concerned in a preliminary injunction suit filed today by State Treasurer Charles A. Snyder. The action was brought by Snyder as a taxpayer and not as an official to prevent Auditor General Lewis, Secretary of State and Finance King and Attorney General Woodruff from sitting as members of the board.

DENVER, Sept. 11.—A new standard of sex relationship is being established in cohabitation among unmarried couples. Judge Ben Lindsey, noted Juvenile court jurist of Denver, declared today.

Commenting on the national census figures showing a large increase in the number of divorces in the United States and figures for Denver, which show one divorce to every two and a half marriages, Lindsey said: "Court figures on divorces do not tell the whole story. Separations are increasing with divorced. The two combined now nearly equal marriages in many large cities. The failure of modern religion and education are responsible for this condition. The church has lost its grip because of the church itself. Our system of education is wholly inadequate to meet new conditions of life and it is becoming more and more a monumental failure compared with what should be."

Judge Lindsey said he knew in Denver of many unmarried couples living together. "By justifying themselves in the practice they are gradually creating a new standard of relationship," the judge said. "I cannot say it is right. I am merely speaking of what it is. What is right and what is wrong must in a large measure be left to time."

The judge referred to printed reports that 50,000 unmarried girls in New York alone are being supported by wealthy men not their husbands.

Japanese Fund Is Expected to Pass $5,000,000 Today

Special to The Courier.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Early returns from Red Cross chapters throughout the country today showed total contributions to Japanese relief of $1,854,000. It was expected $5,000,000 minimum would be passed during the day.

The Red Cross today cabled $1,000,000 to the Japanese Imperial emergency relief bureau to buy medical and other supplies in markets near the disaster zone. Decision to cable this sum was made at a special meeting of the executive committee. It was in response to a recommendation by Cyrus E. Woods, United States ambassador in Tokio, that that sum be made available at once.

Cabling this sum brought the total Red Cross expenditures in Japanese relief work to more than $4,000,000. One hundred thousand blankets were purchased today for immediate shipment.

DIVERS SEARCH IN WRECKAGE FOR MISSING SAILORS

By United Press.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 11.—Deep sea divers probed today through the scattered hulks of the seven naval destroyers wrecked off Point Arguello for bodies of sailors believed entombed there, while a naval board of inquiry convened at Santa Barbara to probe the disaster.

A detachment of 80 men along shore and five tugs standing off the dangerous rocky point are making every effort to recover the bodies of 22 seamen reported dead or missing in the wreck. So far only three bodies are known to have been recovered. Most of the missing men are believed entombed within the underwater hull compartments of the capsized destroyer Young.

The seven ships, the best of the navy, are to be left to die on the rocks as heavy surf beats in on them. The navy men hope to salvage only portions of the valuable apparatus. The general belief of experts is that responsibility for the crash should not be laid to human fallibility but rather to unusual tidal conditions and radio jam.

TRAPPER GIVES DEMONSTRATION OF BEST METHODS

County Game Protector R. G. Bryan of Uniontown, accompanied by State Expert Trapper C. E. Logue of Woolrich, Clinton county, was in the city yesterday afternoon at which time Mr. Logue gave a demonstration as to the proper method to use in making sets for foxes, wildcat, coons, skunks, minks and weasels. Mr. Logue has followed trapping for years and is a master in the art and has proven to be a very valuable man to the State and during the time he is not traveling and giving demonstrations he is employed at the State game refuges. In the last three years he has trapped more than 80 bears which were shipped to other parts of the State and used for stocking purposes.

In addition to explaining the best methods for making sets, Mr. Logue gave instructions as to the best baits to use and how they should be placed in trapping for the various kinds of animals. He made a plea to the sportsmen to help rid the country of noxious animals.

WHERE MUCH OF THE CREDIT BELONGS.

There is no desire to withhold from Governor Pinchot any proper measure of credit due him for having assisted in bringing about a settlement of the anthracite strike. But a careful study of all the factors entering into the situation makes it plain that public opinion, more than Governor Pinchot's personality, leadership or his compromise plan was, in reality, the great and compelling force which brought the contending parties into line in the interests of a peaceful settlement.

The leaders on both sides were astute enough to sense the meaning and import of what portion of the public represented by the consumers of anthracite, was thinking about and quietly determining to do in the event of the failure of the Pinchot plan, or any other, to cause the operators and the miners to exercise the saving grace of common sense.

Neither of these parties had any misunderstanding of the sentiment in the anthracite consuming territory that, if the supply of anthracite was seriously curtailed or stopped by a strike, there would be a counter strike by coal users that would be more than a passing expression of disapproval of a resort to force in the settlement of a wage dispute.

The action of a committee of the Massachusetts legislature, in recommending a boycott of anthracite coal, would have been more or less general wherever it would have been possible to obtain anything like a fairly satisfactory substitute for this form of fuel. Both the miners and the operators saw the handwriting on the wall and it inspired a fear neither could wholly conceal under the bluff they put up at the conferences held by their representatives. The Pinchot proposition came in the nature of a much desired opportunity to divert the trend of public sentiment and the miners, no less than the operators, eagerly seized upon it as the means whereby they could help themselves out of a situation that was steadily becoming more disagreeable, not to say embarrassing.

Both contenders were well aware of the fact that if a prolonged strike ensued a very large part of the anthracite trade would be supplanted by other forms of fuel, which have demonstrated their good qualities and which the producers were in readiness to supply in any needed quantity. The consequence, in such case, being less work for the miners and less business for the operators, made the ending of the strike a matter of safety first for the miners as well as for the operators.

To decide Governor Pinchot all the credit is, therefore, being too generous to him. He is not alone responsible for a settlement having been brought about. Nor is the precise form as contained in his plan such as the coal consuming public regards as the best for safeguarding its interests, as contrasted with the interests of the miners and the operators, both of whom won their chief contention.

A just and equitable bestowal of praise, if any at all is to be given, requires that there be due recognition of the power of public sentiment in bringing the parties to industrial controversy to a realizing sense of their obligations to the great third party.

It will require no smoked glass to observe the eclipses of political ambitions next Tuesday, but the phenomenon may be accompanied by considerable smoke.

The United States Coal Commission may have been successful in diagnosing the cause of coal strikes, but it will strike the average reader of its report that it applied very mild treatment in fixing the responsibility.

Once more the weatherman is playing fair with the Dawson fair.

Only one more day, September 15, upon which to complete your qualifications as a voter at the primary election next Monday. All that is required is to attend to the duty of registration.

To the extent that the Ku Klux Klan is forced by courageous executives like the governor of Oklahoma and by public sentiment to do its gaudy carb, just so will it cease to be an object of interest or curiosity in every community.

Giving the Farmers A Chance

The Forum.

The farmers of America are in a spirit of revolt. They feel that they are not getting their fair share. For every seven farmers in the country there are four dealers. Benjamin F. Yeakum, a railroad president, who has given years of study to agricultural problems, feels that their desperate situation must be solved by the farmers themselves, rather than by governmental machinery.

Mr. Yeakum says the remedy lies in the enactment of national and state laws which will enable cooperative marketing agencies and other farm organizations or individual shippers, to follow up shipments of their goods, commencing with the railroad freight charge through to the final consumer, thus enabling such organizations to ascertain how much, the different commission merchants, wholesale jobbers, distributors, and others handling the farmers' products, receive; and the services they perform therefor; enabling the farmers' organizations to correct and cut out all unnecessary and inequitable charges incurred between the initial shipping point and the ultimate consumer.

With such enabling laws, farmers, through their state, local, and national shipping associations will keep in touch with each other and prevent the shipment of larger quantities of food to the different markets than is required to meet legitimate demands.

No law attempting to regulate the farmers through Washington, as to their method of marketing their products, or attempting to regulate their handling and selling of farm products, will do justice to the farming industry. Farmers will not permanently overcome the difficulties with which they are faced through legislation based upon the impractical theories now being put forward. It would be unfortunate to have a marketing system financed and directed by the government. The best the farmer could hope for under such a system would be temporary relief—harmful in the long run. This is the time to install machinery for permanent operation.

Tolerated and Despised

Newark, N. J., Star-Eagle.

The time has gone by since the average American citizen could not get excited over the agitation for Communism. The agitator has cured him.

This agitator maintains an adjustable set of principles. Addressing an audience of sympathizers he thunders against the government and palts the socialist system as an improvement upon the institutions of paradise. In the presence of the police or in a courtroom he paints himself as a worshiper of the Declaration of Independence, and a soldier for the Constitution. The preaching of violence is denied. As for advertising any change of government says through the ballot box, he raises his right hand and solemnly swears that the changes are a pack of lies.

Promoters of socialism who are constituted partly of bluster and partly of cowardice are never going to get any distance in this country. They are like the coyotes of the western plains—an animal that is tolerated because he is despised. Had the coyote, a thimbleful of courage his race would have been killed off a generation ago.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY.

The papers print a column which they call "Twenty-Five Years Ago Today." And time was I read it and thought, "How queer such strange events should have happened here."

I mocked at my father, who smiled and said: "It was there where this happened," and shook his head.

At some ancient record to indicate the birth of a tribe of now-by-gone date.

Oh, it seemed in youth they could not be so.

Three stories of twenty-five years ago:

Then "Twenty-five years ago today" seemed over and over to fly away.

But I'm getting old, and it can't be shaking my head at my father and them printing the things!

I know.

As the record of twenty-five years ago.

And the children stare at my head

they say.

They think it strange that a man

you see that?

They think it strange that a man should say

He's not so long just a flick, that's all.

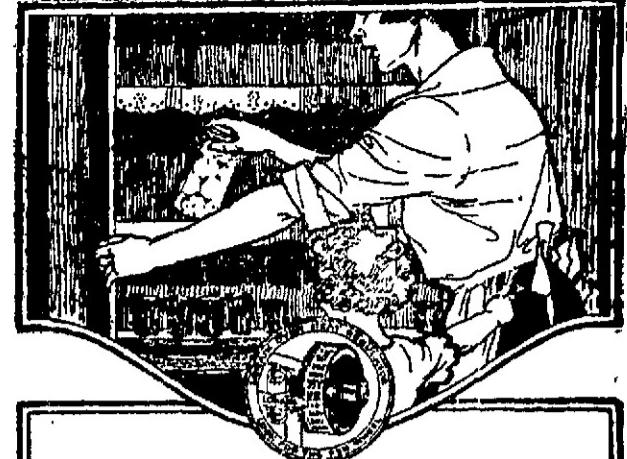

You may think it great but it's really small.

And you'll find it out when the papers

Pantomime 22 Centuries Old

The weird pantomime is about twenty-two centuries old, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. It originally meant an actor and not the act. Literally the word means the 'image' or 'imitation' of something and imitation especially the old Greek and Roman actors could and did. Their plays were usually in dumb show and movements and gestures formed the actors' characters.

Later the pantomime—which now will come to mean the act—was continued into the Middle Ages in the form of the play of Pantomime Colubine and Harlequin—Coloune was a later addition—who are supposed by some scholars to represent the ancient deities of the original pantomime. A little later still pantomime had turned into a b'far still without words and still centering round Harlequin and the

Why Grow Old? Women Should Retain Charm of Sweet Sixteen, Say Stage's "Flapper Grandma"

"Women who let themselves grow old deserve to," was the cryptic remark made by Miss Hopper when she came into court here to ask divorce from G. A. Brown, formerly the wife of De Wolf Hopper.

She has a staunch advocate in Fannie Ward, the American actress, now living in Paris, who thought a leprous grandmother unattractive.

A New Use for a Tea Cart.

One Mother Says:

"My old tea cart took on a new lease on life when I moved it into the bathroom to use as a table for the baby's bath accessories. The top makes a good stand for soap, borax acid solution, powder, pins and fresh clothing, while the lower shelf is used for discarded clothing. It is easy to wheel into the nursery if I need it there, and saves many steps each day."

Colleges Turn Many Away This Fall

STATE COLLEGE, Sept. 11.—If conditions at Penn State hold true at other Pennsylvania colleges, there is an almost unprecedented number of applicants this year for higher education. An early summary would indicate that a record number of applicants have stormed the colleges and universities of the state, and exceeded only in the year following the war.

The greatest number of applications in the history of the institution has been received at The Pennsylvania State College during the summer. Even during the past two weeks, with college opening on Wednesday, the registrar has heard from young men and women desiring to enter, and the total is now almost 2,500; the freshman class is limited this year to 950.

Other colleges and universities in the state are expected to be turning away applicants, though it is not known to what extent. Officials at Penn State greatly regret the necessity for turning away so many young men and especially young women, as it frequently happens that many of those refused are unable to go to another institution because of tuition charges.

Births Almost Treble Deaths During August

The number of births during the month of August in the Connellsville district was nearly three times that of deaths according to the report of A. B. Hood, registrar of vital statistics.

There were 37 births in Connellsville, four in Connellsville township and three in Bullskin township, making a total of 44. Sixteen deaths in Connellsville were reported and none in Bullskin township.

Root Cause of Nearly Every War.

During the World war a well-known French publicist was invited to address a large audience of children from the elementary schools of an American city. Walking quickly onto the stage, he commenced speaking in his own tongue, and then smiling at the bewildered children, he said, in perfect English: "You do not understand me, do you? There, my dear children, you have the root cause of this and nearly every other war. Only through a lack of proper understanding of the point of view of other nations are wars possible"—Christian Science Monitor.

"My wife saved ten dollars at a bargain sale yesterday," said Brown.

STAND TORTURE FOR BEAUTY

Many Paris Women Think Nothing of Having Their Noses Broken and Reset.

Parisianesses are going to such lengths to achieve beauty as quite to put in the shade the painful operation of "displing" (making a hole in the chin by means of a drugged needle).

Many women think nothing of having their noses broken and reset in a different shape, says a Paris correspondent.

Others actually have the eyebrows moved upward or downward, as the fancy dictates. This necessitates a complete removal of the hair and either a false and forced growth in a different position or makeup.

One beauty expert, who undertakes to change the form of a woman's lips, has performed many operations. His latest experiment is to make the upper lip turn up, giving it an alluring pout.

To do this he stretches a thin hair from the upper lip to the tip of the nose. This effect, naturally, is limited to actresses, who use it on the stage only.

Some fashionable women are being laughed at for their insistence on having their cosmetics flavored. One has her lip-rouge tasting of banana.

WOMEN GIVE OUT

Housework is hard enough when healthy. Every Connellsville woman who is having backache, blisters and nervous spells, dizzy headaches and kidney or bladder troubles, should be glad to heed this Connellsville woman's experience:

Mrs. Lucilia Anderson, 601 York avenue, says: "I was bothered with terrible backaches which caused misery for hours at a time. When I washed all day or stood before the ironing board, a burning pain existed in the small of my back that felt as though a red hot iron had been plunged in my spine. I had dizzy spells and often yawned from the effect of those attacks. My kidneys were sluggish, too. I purchased Dean's Kidney Pills from Moore's Drug Store and after using them was cured."

"Banted" Coffee From Sao Paulo.

It is against the law now to label as "Java" coffee that does not come from Java or Sumatra. Real Mocha is grown in Arabia, and after the coffee became well known and very popular some unscrupulous dealers applied this name to coffee from other countries.

Coffees frequently take their names from the ports from which they are shipped. The most widely used variety in this country is called "Santon" after a port of Sao Paulo, the great coffee-producing state of Brazil.

Racing Program at Dawson. Fair Opens Wednesday P.M.

Cream of Half-Milers Now at Park Ready for the Signal to Start.

BIG OPENER CROWD TODAY

Promptly at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon the 2:20 pace with a stake purse of $1,000, will get under way at Dawson, marking the initial heat of the track events in connection with the eighth annual Fayette County Fair. The cream of the half-milers are at Dawson and the best racing in a decade is guaranteed. The track record at Dawson is certain to fall, barring a heavy track. The recent rains have not injured the half mile dirt oval but much to the contrary, the careful nursing process has developed the track to the best condition in its career.

The best racing should be witnessed tomorrow and Thursday. There are 29 entries for the first race tomorrow and positively not less than ten will face the starter. As the field is fast and the stake is $1,000, patrons of the fair are assured some excellent sport. "H. T. C." the Cochran horse which was converted from a trotter to a pacer, is a starter in the first race tomorrow and will go out to win. He took his race at Wheeling last week and is in the best possible condition. Two other events, the 2:25 pace and the 2:15 trot are also scheduled for tomorrow. There is a fast field entered in both these events.

On Thursday, there will be four races and the same number on Friday. The sensation of the half-mile circuit this year, "Tramp-A-New" will go in the 2:15 pace on Thursday. This heaviest has lost but one race all season and has turned over a dozen heats in 2:07 1-4 on tracks much slower than Dawson. The track record at Dawson is 2:07 3-4.

In the free-for-all pace on Thursday, the track record should topple. Entered in this classic are: William, 1:58 1-4, Earl H. Pointer, 2:03 1-4, Ruth Patch, 2:03 1-4, Auto Pace, 2:07 1-4 and a quartet of other pacers all marked under 2:10. This event should produce the fastest racing ever witnessed in a western Pennsylvania harness event. The 2:13 trot on Thursday will also bring out some fast gosers. In a workout yesterday, Harvest Barbara, an entry in this event, stepped in 2:12 3-4. Julia Mupe with Reynolds up, was also clocked in fast time.

The Dawson fairground is crowded today with the largest first day attendance in its history. Representative farmers and stock raisers from all parts of the county were present. This was due to the untiring efforts of the Cochran and the able assistance of Fayette County Farm Agent C. L. Rumberger. The various displays are really amazing in size and number.

While there is no carnival company at the fair there are plenty of amusements. The mid-way is filled with rides of most modern construction but not an objectionable feature can be found. Gambling devices are not permitted on the grounds. This evening, several hundred couples have planned to participate in the good old-fashioned square dance. A special platform has been erected in the infield for the old-timers. Dancers in the big auditorium will shuffle along to the music of Stokel's Mendelssohn orchestra, a nine piece band with a group of very capable entertainers.

All roads leading to Dawson are in the best possible condition. No detours exist. Autolists desiring to park in the race track infield must use the upper gate, the same entrance which has been used heretofore. Autolists desiring to use the new four acre parking place at the upper end of the track must use the new entrance to the left of the main gate. The new parking place permits speedy entrance and exit to the fair grounds and is void of congestion possibilities.

Joe Nirella and his Westinghouse Band are at Dawson until Friday night. The band occupies a new location in the center of the big grandstand. In former years, the band was perched in an infield stand.

ALL READY FOR DEMPSEY-FIRPO BOUT ON FRIDAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—With the removal yesterday of all legal obstacles that have beset the path of the Dempsey-Firpo heavyweight title match, work was rushed ahead on the additions to the Polo Grounds arena, advance ticket sales boomed and the champion and his challenger put redoubled energy into the diminishing stages of their training campaigns for the battle next Friday night.

The threatened legal entanglements were brushed aside in supreme court when Justice Hagarty denied the application of Harry Wills, negro challenger, for a temporary injunction against the championship struggle.

Details of the world's heavyweight championship match between Luis Angel Firpo and Jack Dempsey are:

Place—Polo Grounds, home of New York Giants.

Limit—Fifteen rounds; judges' decision.

Time of bout—10 P. M., eastern daylight.

Purses—Dempsey to receive 27 per cent of gross receipts, Firpo 12½ per cent.

"QUICKSANDS," featuring Richard Dix and Helene Chadwick, provides splendid entertainment today at this theatre. The picture is in five acts and will please all members of the family. Wednesday and Thursday, Gladys Walton will be seen in "SAWDUST," a picturization of life beneath the canvas.

Miss Walton has the role of Nita, the tight-rope walker, around whom the threads of the story are woven, and the part affords her an opportunity to display her athletic skill as well as her dramatic ability. The picture presents her in her strongest role, perhaps, since her appearance in "Pink Tights," another story of circus life in which she scored a tremendous hit.

"SAWDUST" was written by Courtney Riley Cooper and adapted to the screen by Harvey Gates. Mr. Cooper has been long associated with one of the biggest circuses in the country and has put much of the spirit and atmosphere of the life with which he is so familiar into the story.

The picture retains the flavor of the original story and has a deep sympathetic appeal. It was produced under the direction of Jack Conway.

The Soisson

"THE SUNSHINE TRAIL," showing today and tomorrow at this theatre, presents Douglas MacLean in the title role.

"The Sunshine Trail" is a zippy western comedy-drama which tells the story of a doughboy-cowboy who returns from the war expecting to find his sweetheart awaiting him. He also is half-way convinced that his fellow townsmen will call out the band and make a hero of him. Instead, however:

Crooks rob him of his pants and money; a strange woman steals his baby off on him; a lawyer tries to demand him of a $50,000 inheritance; con artists, sheriffs and detectives follow him everywhere, mistaking him for a burglar; a mob accuses him of kidnapping and is on the verge of lynching him; bank bandits strip his clothes full of holes when he chases their car on a motorcycle; and finally, after he has seen his best girl wearing the other fellow's engagement ring, the returned war veteran is handcuffed and thrown into jail—all right in his home town.

It's a snug but highly amusing series of adventures which Douglas MacLean has in "The Sunshine Trail." Trouble certainly piles high for him right from the jump. And all the trouble devolves from his attempts to help others.

Supporting Douglas MacLean is a fine cast including Paith Roberts, Little Muriel Frances Duna, Josephine Sedgwick, William Courtright, Barney Fury, Rex Cheyenne and Albert Hart.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Tom Mix will be seen in "Catch My Smoke."

The Orpheum

"SALOMY JANE," with Jacqueline Logan in the stellar role, is the feature attraction today and tomorrow at this theatre.

"Salomy Jane" is different, principally because it transfers to the screen human spirit of Bret Harte, the author. While hundreds of western thrillers have been produced, none of them, either in the quality of story, spirited action or judicious and historic treatment, display the character types of the romantic days of '49 as delightfully as does "Salomy Jane." Superior direction, the characters portrayed by well known screen artists, admirable photography, real romance, drama and thrills—all these contribute to make this production one of extraordinary merit.

There are many really dramatic scenes in the development of the story. These include the hold-up of the stage driven by Yuba Bill by highwaymen, the capture of the stranger, trial and conviction by the Vigilantes.

Salomy Jane kisses the stranger as he is being led to execution. The stranger escapes and does to the mountains.

The battle of the stranger with Baldwin, who is shot from ambush by Rufus Waters, who regards Baldwin as a rival for Jane's hand. Suspicion points to the stranger who hides in Jane's cabin.

Escape of the stranger wearing the coat of Jane's father which she had given him. He is ambushed by Indians, an enemy of Jane's father, but the stranger eludes and kills him in self-defense.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, "Children of Jazz" will be shown.

HAVE "MUMMY" OF DINOSAUR

Ice Fields of Siberia Recently Made a Valuable Contribution to Scientific Annals.

The vast ice fields of Siberia have in many instances acted as a natural cold storage plant for the preservation of the flesh of the mammoth, this prehistoric cousin of the elephant having been dug out of his chilly grave intact on numerous occasions. It has always been supposed, however, that this was the only instance in which anything more than the bare bones of the fauna of past geological epochs had come down to us. Doubtless the mammoth will continue to stand unique in this respect; but he is no longer unapproached. There has recently been put on exhibition in the Senckenberg museum, Frankfurt-am-Main, a dinosaur skeleton which carries with it a considerable portion of the skin of the animal, in mummified form. In particular the epidermis over the animal's back is present practically intact. The skeleton has been mounted in dying position, and makes altogether an impressive exhibit.

Why "Pop"?

Why do we say "pop" the question when we refer to a marriage proposal. "Pop," which comes down to us from the Middle Ages, has always meant suddenness, and at one period the "popper" was the footpad who leapt at his victim from behind a hedge, robbed him, and, as suddenly disappeared again. Even in its modern sense, as applied to the pop of a cork, we have the same root meaning to the word. In every sense, then, to "pop the question" is applicable to a proposal which is supposed to be caused by the sudden explosion of pent-up emotions. The aunts, after taking perhaps weeks to make up their mind, had suddenly screwed up their pluck and asked the question upon which his happiness depended.

Our Favorite Recipe.

"How may we extract the skunks from under our house?" is the somewhat startling question asked by a reader of an agricultural magazine. Another reader, from the depths of a wider experience, answers the question thus: See that the tail is tight where they live, but leave an opening for them to go out. Take a bottle of household ammonia, pull out the cork, slip a long stick in its place, and shove the bottle into the skunk's habitation. Raise the stick and smash the bottle. The skunks will all march out, saying: "Our odor may be a little disagreeable to our enemies, but here they are using poison gas on us! We call that low, down!" They dislike the fumes so much that it is said they never come back.—The Opinion.

FALL OF NINEVEH
FIXED AT 612 B.C.

Old Testament Account and Ancient Scribes Checked Up.

DISPARITY FOUND TO EXIST

A clay tablet interpreted by C. J. Gadd of the British museum, at the annual meeting of the British Academy, shows that the famous fall of Nineveh after a siege by King Nabopolassar, leader of the Babylonian forces against the Assyrian capital, really took place in 612 B. C. and not, as the histories state, in 606.

The clay tablet, about six inches in length, is inscribed on both sides with a text in the minute cuneiform writing used by the Babylonians during the reigns of their own later kings and of the Persian Achaeans who succeeded them by right of conquest. On the side the scribe has written: "Who so loveth Nabu and Marduk, let him preserve this, and not suffer it to leave his hands." Since these two gods are particularly associated with Babylon, Mr. Gadd says, and since the text is concerned with the doings of a Babylonian king, it is almost certain that the tablet was written in Babylon itself, and was, doubtless, found upon the site of the ancient city.

On this tablet, in the space of 75 lines, are set down the chief events which occurred between the tenth and seventeenth years of Nabopolassar, the founder of the New Babylonian kingdom. But as this monarch reigned from B. C. 625 to 604, it follows that the years with which the chronicle deals are B. C. 610-600. Most fortunate of all, and indeed most unexpected, these years are found to include that of the destruction of Nineveh, which occurred in the fourteenth year—i.e., B. C. 612, some six years earlier than the date which has hitherto been inferred. In this connection the new record has an interesting connect with a passage of Old Testament history.

The Biblical Account.

In the reign of Josiah, king of Judah, "Pharaoh Necho, king of Egypt, went up against the king of Assyria to the River Euphrates, and King Josiah went against him; and he slew him at Megiddo, when he had seen him" (II Kings, 23:29). The same event is recounted by the historian Josephus, who says: "Necho, king of Egypt, gathered an army and advanced to the River Euphrates, to fight against the Medes and Babylonians, who had destroyed the Assyrian empire." Although this probably occurred in B. C. 606, one year after the chronicle breaks off, yet the course of events in the preceding years shows that Josephus is strictly correct; it was the Medes and Babylonians whom Necho went to fight, since it had been the policy of Egypt to support the declining power of Assyria against these nations, who had, in fact, by the capture of Nineveh in 612, practically extinguished the Assyrian empire.

In view of this apparent discrepancy between the Old Testament and Josephus, where the latter is obviously right, it will remain for Biblical critics to decide whether the Hebrew text must necessarily be translated "against the king of Assyria." If not, then the apparent contradiction disappears.

But how, in any case, could there be a king of Assyria in 608 if Nineveh had been destroyed in 612? The answer to this question involves one of the most surprising results of the new chronicle, Mr. Gadd declares. At the fall of Nineveh a resolute band of the defenders, seeing that the city was lost, broke through the lines of the besiegers and marched westward to the provincial capital at Harran, which stood upon the River Balikh, a tributary of the Euphrates. In this city, always the seat of the Turans, or commander-in-chief of the Assyrian army, a new king named Ashurnabullit ascended the throne, and reigned until he was driven out in 610 by a mixed Scythian and Babylonian army. An attempt in the next year to regain the city with the help of Egyptian reinforcements proved unsuccessful.

Classical Writers Uphold.

The account given by the chronicle of the siege and fall of Nineveh is of great interest, not only in itself but for comparison with the versions of classical writers. We are now informed that Cyaxares the Mede, who appears several times in the document, began his operations against the capital in the year 614. Unable at first to make any impression on his main objective, he yet carried the outlying cities of Tarbis and Ashur in this year, and concluded a formal alliance with the king of Babylon over the rulers of the latter. Classical sources add that a marriage was arranged between a son and daughter of the leaders.

In the following year some great disaster overtook the Medes, for though the chronicle makes no mention of them whatsoever, the beleaguered king of Assyria is actually able to issue from Nineveh and raise the siege which Nabopolassar had laid against the town of Anat.

The nature of this disaster is known from Herodotus: the Medes were suddenly attacked before Nineveh by an onslaught of Scythians and routed by them. The same invaders appear also in Diodorus, who describes them as "Bactrians," and says that they were persuaded to join in the revolt against Sardanapalus. But in 612, according to the chronicle, all three nations, Medes, Babylonians and Scythians, unite against Nineveh, and at last the city falls and is totally destroyed.

How to tell for sure—what oil your car needs To the Man who owns — a Ford

In design, construction, operation, and lubrication, the Ford is unique. The engine oil must adequately and efficiently lubricate both transmission and multiple disc clutch. In Ford engine lubrication the following points must be considered:

(1)—The Ford connecting rod bearings have no oil holes or oil grooves, nor are the lower ends of the connecting rods equipped with oil dippers or splashes. Hence the need for oil which atomizes readily and distributes freely throughout the entire bearing area.

(2)—The Ford pistons over-run the valve seat level. Any excess of oil carried up by the pistons readily finds its way onto the valves and seats. Hence the need of a clean-burning and non-carbon forming lubricant. Otherwise gumming of the valves results.

(3)—The Ford Planetary transmission operates in a bath of engine oil. The close-fitting sleeves and bushings demand a free-flowing oil of correct body to insure thorough distribution to these parts.

(4)—The Ford multiple disc clutch operates continually in a bath of engine oil. A free-flowing oil of the correct body and character is necessary to assure positive, quick engagement with no slipping and an instantaneous release of the clutch without dragging.

(5)—Chattering of Ford transmission bands comes from incorrectly adjusted bands or worn out linings, and is aggravated by unburned fuel mixed with the lubricating oil. In such cases the diluted oil should be replaced with fresh oil and the bands correctly adjusted or the linings renewed. To attempt to remedy such mechanical conditions by the use of so-called "anti-chattering" oils containing foreign material which may separate, or bind oil, wax, grease or other animal fats which decompose under heat, is obviously wrong and likely to cause gumming of the valve stems, carbon deposit and other troubles.

Gargoyle Mobiloil "E" is free from foreign material or animal fats. It is of the correct body, character and fluidity and especially manufactured to scientifically meet the exacting requirements of Ford cars both summer and winter.

a Buick

Your Buick engine, because of its large reserve horse-power and efficient cooling system, operates at comparatively low temperatures.

With Buick valve-in-head construction the cooling area of the combustion chambers is relatively small. This, together with compression pressure of 7.5 lbs., makes this engine sensitive to any appreciable carbon deposits, particularly in view of the present day fuels. Where excessive carbon deposits exist, "pinging" or knocking results. To minimize carbon deposits under these conditions, your engine requires a well refined, clean burning oil which will be thoroughly distributed by the lubricating system.

For all Buick models (except 1923) use Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic both summer and winter.

The 1923 Buick engine differs from previous models, in so far as lubrication is concerned. The splash troughs are covered, leaving a slot through which the splash dipper passes to project the lubricant. This baffled splash trough design appreciably reduces the quantity of oil distributed so that the lubricating oil will not splash to the cylinders in excess quantities or reach the combustion chambers too freely.

The two center crankshaft bearings are supplied with oil from pressure.

These changes in the 1923 Buick construction permit the use in summer of an oil heavier in body and richer in character than before, without the possibility of objectionable carbon accumulations.

Hence, for the 1923 Buick, Gargoyle Mobiloil "A" in summer and Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic in winter will insure correct lubrication.

All engine parts except the center crank-

shaft bearing are lubricated by an oil mist caused by the dipping of the connecting rod splashes in the oil troughs provided under each cylinder. Oil is forced under pressure to the center crankshaft bearing.

Carbon deposits in this engine, because of the high compression pressures and combustion chamber construction, are particularly objectionable. Correct lubrication is essential to the maintenance of high efficiency. Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic will leave a minimum of carbon deposits, and is of the correct body and character to provide adequate engine lubrication under all operating conditions.

The use of Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic both summer and winter will assure correct engine lubrication and lead to the satisfactory performance you have a right to expect of your Chevrolet.

a Chevrolet 490

Your Chevrolet 490 engine is of valve-in-head construction and designed for high compression pressures of approximately 87 pounds.

The lubricating system is of the splash circulating type. The gear type oil pump is in an exposed position directly in back of the radiator, and is considerably above the level of the oil in the reservoir. There are long lengths of exposed oil piping on both the suction and discharge sides of the pump.

All engine parts except the center crank-

shaft bearing are lubricated by an oil mist caused by the dipping of the connecting rod splashes in the oil troughs provided under each cylinder. Oil is forced under pressure to the center crankshaft bearing.

Carbon deposits in this engine, because of the high compression pressures and combustion chamber construction, are particularly objectionable. Correct lubrication is essential to the maintenance of high efficiency. Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic will leave a minimum of carbon deposits, and is of the correct body and character to provide adequate engine lubrication under all operating conditions.

The use of Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic both summer and winter will assure correct engine lubrication and lead to the satisfactory performance you have a right to expect of your Chevrolet.

Your Dodge engine is of the four-cylinder, vertical, I-head type, bore 3 1/2", stroke 4 1/2". It is equipped with a splash circulating system of lubrication employing a vane pump located above the oil level.

Oil distribution is effected by dippers on the low ends of the connecting rods. These dip into the oil in the splash troughs and project it to all friction surfaces within the engine. 3 1/2" holes above the dippers are provided to convey the oil into the crank pin bearings.

On all Dodge engines, prior to 1923, cast iron pistons were used. Because of the present day fuels, comparatively small carbon deposits in these engines quickly result in "pinging" or knocking.

It is of utmost importance, therefore, that a clean burning oil be used in these engines, under all operating conditions in order to eliminate the tendency toward excessive carbon accumulations. Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic meets these requirements as this oil is of sufficient body to assure thorough engine lubrication and is of such character as to deliver oil to the engine will result.

"But she had bitten him in the arm. That was hardly the right spirit. That, he felt, constituted an obstacle."

"Oh, I'm sorry!" she cried.

"Well, of course, if she regretted her rash act . . . After all, an impulsive girl might bite a man in the arm in the excitement of that moment and still have a sweet, womanly nature."

"The crowd seemed to make Pliny-Bodines so nervous."

Sam might have remained mystified, but at this juncture there proceeded from a bundle of rugs in the neighborhood of the girl's lower ribs a sharp yapping sound.

"I hope he didn't hurt you much. You're the third person he's bitten today." She kissed the animal in a loving and congratulatory way on the tip of his black nose. "Not counting ballboys, of course," she added. And then she was swept from him by the crowd and he was left thinking of all the things he might have said—all those graceful, witty, ingratiating things which just make a bit of difference on these occasions.

Sam reached the gun-plane, showed his ticket, and made his way through the crowd of passengers, passengers' friends, stewards, junior officers and sailors who infested the dock. He proceeded down the main companion-way, through a rich smell of India-rubber and mixed pleases, as far as the dining-saloon; then turned to his stateroom.

A footstep sounded in the passage outside. The door opened.

"Hello, Eustace!" said Sam.

Eustace Hignett nodded listlessly, sat down on his bag and emitted a deep sigh. He was a small, fragile-looking young man with a pale, intellectual face. Dark hair fell in a sweep over his forehead. He looked like a man who would write very little, as indeed he did.

"Hello!" he said, in a hollow voice.

"What on earth's the matter?" said Sam.

"The matter?" Eustace Hignett laughed, mirthlessly. "Oh, nothing.

"Oh, Nothing, Nothing Much—Nothing to Signify—Only My Heart's Broken."

Nothing much. Nothing to signify. Only my heart's broken." He eyed with considerable malignity the bottle of water in the rack above his head, a hurried object provided by the company for clients who might desire to clean their teeth during the voyage. "If you would cure to hear the story?" he said.

"Go ahead."

"It's quite short."

"That's good."

"Soon after I arrived in America I met a girl . . ."

"Talking of girls," said Marlowe with enthusiasm. "I've just seen the only one in the world that really amounts to anything, and was like this. I was shoving my way through the mob on the dock, when suddenly . . ."

"Shall I tell you my story, or will you tell me yours?"

"Oh, sorry! Go ahead."

Eustace Hignett scowled at the printed notice on the wall informing occupants of the stateroom that name of their steward was J. B. Bigsby.

"She was an extraordinarily pretty

"What was her name?"

"Wilhelmina Bonnett. She was an extraordinarily pretty girl and highly intelligent. I read her all my poems and she appreciated them immensely. She enjoyed my singing. My conversation appeared to interest her. She admired me . . ."

"I see. You made a hit. Now go on with the rest of the story."

"I asked her to be my wife and she consented. We both agreed that a winter wedding was what we wanted. We thought her father might stop the thing if he knew, and I was dashed sure my mother would—so we decided to get married without telling anybody by now," said Eustace, with a wistful glance at the port-hole. "I ought to have been on my honeymoon. Everything was settled. I had the license and the parson's fee. I had been breaking in a new tie for the wedding."

"And then you quarreled?"

"Nothing of the kind. I wish you could stop trying to tell me the story. I'm telling you. What happened is this: somehow—I can't make out how—mother found out. And then, of course it was all over. She stopped the thing."

crowded deck. And, as he did so, a scream, followed by confused shouting, came from the rail nearest the shore. He perceived that the rail was black with people hanging over it. They were all looking into the water.

Samuel Marlowe was not one of those who pass aloof by when there is excitement toward. To dash to the rail and shove a fat man in a tweed cap to one side was with him the work of a moment. He had thus an excellent view of what was going on—a view which he improved the next instant by climbing up and kneeling on the rail.

There was a man in the water, a man whose upper portion, the only one visible, was clad in a blue jersey.

He wore a derby hat, and from time to time as he battled with the waves he would put up a hand and adjust this more firmly on his head. A dressy swimmer.

Scarcely had he taken in this spectacle when Marlowe became aware of the girl he had met on the dock. She was standing a few feet away, leaning out over the rail with wide eyes and parted lips. Like everybody else she was staring into the water.

As Sam looked at her the thought crossed his mind that here was a wonderful chance of making the most tremendous impression on this girl. What would she not think of a man who, reckless of his own safety, dived in and went boldly to the rescue? And there were men, no doubt, who would be chumps enough to do it, he thought, as he prepared to shift back to a position of greater safety.

At this moment the fat man in the tweed cap, increased at having been jolted out of the front row, made his charge. He had been coughing, the better to spring. Now he sprang. His full weight took Sam squarely in the spine. There was an instant in which that young man hung, as it were, between sea and sky; then he shot down over the rail to join the man in the blue jersey, who had just discovered that his hat was not on straight and had paused to adjust it once more with a few skillful touches of the finger.

In the brief interval of time which Marlowe had spent in the stateroom, chatting with Eustace about the latter's bruised soul, some rather curious things had been happening above. Not extraordinary, perhaps, but curious. These must now be related. A story, if it is to grip the reader, should I am aware, go always forward. It should march. It should leap from crag to crag like the chamois of the Alps. If there is one thing I hate, it is a novel which gets you interested in the hero in chapter one and then cuts back in chapter two to tell you all about his grandfather. Nevertheless, at this point we must go back a space. We must return to the moment when, having deposited her Pekinese dog in her stateroom, the girl with the red hair came out again on deck. This happened just about the time when Eustace Hignett was beginning his narrative.

By now the bustle which precedes the departure of an ocean liner was at its height. Hoarse voices were crying "All for the shore!" The gangway was thronged with friends of passengers returning to land. The crowd on the pier waved flags and handkerchiefs and shouted unintelligibly. Members of the crew stood alertly by the gangplank ready to draw it in as soon as the last steer-off had crossed.

"Did you explain about the trou-

"Yes. It seemed to make things worse. She said that she could forgive a man anything except being ridiculous."

"I think you're well out of it," said Sam judicially. "She can't have been much of a girl."

"I feel that now. But it doesn't alter the fact that my life is ruined. I have become a woman-hater. Women! When I think how mother behaved and how Wilhelmina treated me I wonder there isn't a law against them. What mighty lies have not been done by women! Who was it betrayed the Capitol?"

"In Washington?" said Sam, puzzled. He had heard nothing of this. But then he generally confined his reading of the papers to the sporting page.

"I was quoting from Thomas Otway's 'Orphan' I wish I could write like Otway. He knew what he was talking about."

The girl went to the rail and gazed earnestly at the shore. There was an anxious expression on her face. She had the air of one who was waiting for someone to appear. Her domineering was that of Mariana at the Mounted Grange. "If come not!" she seemed to be saying. She glanced at her wrist watch, then scanned the dock once more.

There was a rattle as the gang-plank moved inward and was deposited on the deck. The girl uttered a little cry of dismay. Then suddenly her face brightened and she began to wave her arm to attract the attention of an elderly man with a red face made redder by exertion, who had just forced his way to the edge of the dock and was peering up at the passenger-lined rail.

The boat had now begun to move slowly out of its slip, lurching into the river. Ropes had been cast off, and an ever-widening strip of water appeared between the vessel and the shore. It was now that the man on the dock sighted the girl. She gestured at him. He gestured back at her. She appeared helpless and baffled, but he showed himself a person of resource, of the stuff of which great generals are made. Foch is just like that, a bird at changing preconceived plans to suit the exigencies of the moment.

RIBBONS AND SEA SHADES FOR EVENING

An exquisite harmony of line and coloring was attained in the creation of this Parisian model.

Six blue faille ribbon edged in silver is mounted in parallel rows on silver fish net to make the close fitting foundation skirt and bodice, while the bouffant overskirt of sea green chiffon is decorated with silver-edged green ribbon and a tiny piping of fur.

This combination of fur and ribbon is one of the newest notes of fall and winter fashions.

SOUTHERN NEGROES FACING HARSHIPS AND UNEMPLOYMENT

Chicago Unable to Provide Homes for Newcomers to Its "Black Belt."

INVADE SELECT SUBURBS

By EDWARD C. DERR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—Hundreds of thousands of southern plantation negroes, migrating to the industrial centers of the north in search of higher wages, are facing unemployment and hardships, when cold weather sets in, a survey by the United Press indicates.

While practically every train reaching Chicago from the south carries from one to seven coaches of negroes who have deserted the plantations in the hope of greater opportunities, the demand for their services is decreasing and many are doomed to disappointment, according to the Chicago Urban League, leading negro welfare organization.

The tide of the negro migration—started during the war—is now at its height. More than 25,000 have come to Chicago alone since the first of the year. They are still coming at the rate of 3,000 each month. Other cities have received proportional quotas.

Have Two Motives.
Two motives inspire the negro migration, the leaders say. These are: 1—Belief that they will be paid higher wages.

2—Belief that they will benefit socially.

The first hope is only partially realized. While the general scale of industrial wages in the north is above southern levels, jobs are now at a premium and thousands of negroes are out of work. More than a score of agencies are working to find employment for the negro. Hundreds of them unschooled in "bumming about for a job," frightened by the lack of a home and the need for money, have joined the "army of the unemployed."

Chicago's West Madison street, where farm-hands, factory workers, construction laborers, and "just fakers" mingle in the common search for jobs, is being invaded.

While the warm weather continues, most of the negroes sustain themselves by an occasional "short time" job and the long cherished hope of better social conditions, according to employment agencies, but with the approach of winter and the growing condition of unemployment, many face privation.

In scattered cases, it is said, a negro will accept a job at lower wages than he was paid in the south. For the most part, however, they eschew low wages, demanding that they be paid on a level with white labor.

Better Social Conditions.

For those who succeed in obtaining jobs, their second hope—better social conditions—is fulfilled, their welfare workers believe.

They live, for the most part, in segregated colonies where they are given liberties unknown to them in the south. They have their own schools, their own libraries, their own places of amusement.

But even these improved social conditions are threatened by the great migration now in progress. Chicago's "black belt," a wide area over the south side, is expanding into fresh territory. The white population moves farther south. The negroes move into their deserted homes. But the movement is too slow to keep pace with the steady stream of negroes from the south. When there are no houses available, they "double up" with friends and relatives, until conditions are overcrowded and unsanitary, social leaders report.

An interesting feature of the housing problem is the invasion of Evanston, a fashionable north shore suburb, by the more prosperous negroes. Evanston, seat of Northwestern University and noted for its wealthy and socially prominent families, has been called "the Athens of America." Although most of the negroes moving into the little city are employed as janitors, chauffeurs, gardeners, and maids in the great mansions, Evanston bestrides even its older, less desirable streets to the negro workers.

In the Steel District.

In other cities—notably the Gary, Ind., steel district—there is no recognized segregation system and the negroes mix more freely with the white population. No serious race feeling has been apparent.

It is in this great steel center, however, that social and economic leaders see a hope of curing for the food of southern negroes. With inauguration of the eight-hour-day, hundreds of workers are needed and many negroes are being diverted from Chicago to the Gary district.

A new movement, still in the formative period, is being started to provide work for newly arrived negroes, the United Press learned. Faced with the problem of "no jobs available" for plantation negroes who are totally inexperienced in factories, social organizations are starting an investigation to learn the possibility and advisability of placing them on farms throughout the great wheat fields of the middle west. In view of the movement of labor from the farms to the cities during the past decade, it is believed many can find work either as farm "hands" or as tenant farmers in Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Wisconsin, Nebraska and the Dakotas.

No Profit.
"Why did you stop playing poker?"
"The hours were very trying. Then I had to pay when I lost and my wife selected when I won."

The Question.
"Try one of these cigars, old man; they're the best things out!"
"How are they when they're lighted?"—Patchader.

Evening Mantles Gorgeous Affairs

Velvet, Brocaded and Plain, of Metal Brocade and Metal Lace.

Evening mantles may be described in brief as gorgeous affairs, brilliant in color and splendid in material, seemingly more appropriate for winter, observes a fashion writer in the New York Tribune. They are of velvet, brocaded and plain, of metal brocade and metal lace. In resume, we may say that every material is used from fur to lace. Metal lace is a rival to metal cloth as the favored and most elegant medium. Sometimes the two are combined.

Collars offer as much variety as the form of the wrap. The collars are wrap for evening as well as for afternoon wear, has not met with much success. Every woman realizes that nothing is so becoming as the frame formed for the face by a high collar. This is one of the reasons why wraps with the standing collar have met with such great success.

The idea of a puff taken in a bias way or a roll—a bourselet, as the French call it—is the simplest and most general form. There are some collars of fur, mink or sable, but the fancy collar is of material worked in some ingenious way, often with the insertion of flowers or strips of fur or perhaps of velvet intermingling with the material when it is of a delicate nature such as lace or chiffon.

A charming idea used by one designer is the terrasse of two materials softly taken around a bourselet. In fact, any of these collars is very much softer and prettier than the hard Black Bath Coat With Colored Embroideries, Enriching Collar and Inside of Broad Sleeves.

Plated collar of the material introduced last season, which must, however, be acknowledged as the pioneer of present styles.

Another youthful idea is the ribbon wrap. This is of various widths of crimson velvet ribbon, the widest, at the hem, being about nine inches.

These are stitched upon a volute almost background of the same shade, with about one-half inch of distance between each ribbon. The wrap is three-quarters length, the narrowest widths of ribbon, about one inch, being at the point where the wrap reaches the collar, to which it is gathered quite full.

This collar is formed of alternating rows of mink tail and puffs of velvet.

Drooping--

A PRETTY little model with the drooping brim that so many youthful women favor comes in Velvet. Its color is Wood brown. In shape it is very similar to the sketch above. Wouldn't you like to have it? $19.50.

Cabachons--

ABAHOHNS desert the Realm of Frocks and begin to trim the smartest hats—as the sketch suggests. If you are one who likes to wear the smart cloche, a clever hat, here, in henna, is trimmed with grosgrain cabachons of the same color. $13.50.

Panne Velvet--

PANNE VELVET forms a brilliant background for the rosette trimmings of a chapeau which blends a variety of colors as successfully as the rainbow. A mode that can double the beauty of either suit or fur-trimmed coat! Millinery Day will feature it at an appealing price—$11.05. The sketch suggests its timeliness.

The Vogue For Pleats--

PLEATS are to play a major part in the Mode Autumn and their popularity has even spread to hats. If your frock is to have a metal girdle—or a touch of silver—in its trimming—a pretty hat to set it off comes in Panne velvet with pleating all across its front. A silver ornament gives the model a final touch of verve and charm. $12.50. Pleated trimmings manifest themselves in many other interesting ways. You will want to see them.
